Confederation Line - update on trial run \(self.ottawa\)

submitted 9 hours ago by burner12345678987654

So, using a burner as I might loose my job on it, but this is too much now... The consortium has still been unable to perform a correct trial run for the Confederation Line; being unable to run the line during 12 "perfect days". So far, they have been able to go up to day 5, or 6 but they are having issue with the Alstom trains. Alstom is now trying to bring all their experts from the World to try to resolve the availability and reliability issues. The consortium is also trying to bring experts (not employed by the consortium) to support and help to fix this mess. Worst: The City has agreed to change the rules of the trial run. Failures will no longer reset the counter to "Day 0" but to "Day x", whatever was the day x when the failure happened. Working in this field, this is simply disgusting and a disgrace. This is just dangerous for the public and should not been allowed. I wanted to make sure the truth would go out to be able to look at myself in the mirror... Enjoy the mess...

I encourage you to go directly to the media with this. They will maintain your anonimity, but also verify that you're not full of shit. If you really care that much, this is the approach you need to take
