Just a quick question. What the hell is more SNC engineering support gonna do for getting an effective maintenance regime, DEPENDABLE vehicles and a yard operation that can function effectively?

The goal for RTM should be

Trains fully inspected and “good for revenue service” at the handover platform at (or before) the scheduled time, technician support on the mainline during all revenue service hours, technician support in the TOCC during all revenue service hours and at least one spare train at a handover platform ready to launch on moments notice during all revenue service hours. LATE DEPARTURES FROM THE YARD IS NOT ACCEPTABLE!!

The priority for OCT is having operators at the handover platform and on the spare trains when available, extra operators at terminals for “turn and burn” operations with clear internal communication process for implementation of such operations between TOCC and field staff, constant communication between TOCC and YCC on vehicle status and a clearly defined communication process for where vehicle techs are located/assigned and reporting/direction relationships between vehicle techs and TOCC.

To help our us I am in the process of developing standard guidelines for ERCs and TOCC superintendents. Hope to have out by Monday latest

Hence my comments. Same people - different results are required. And I am not joking.

Hi Geoff

As requested - RTM senior coverage is listed below.

I am awaiting further info from SNC. Robert Hinchcliffe may also be there and he is trying to get more SNC engineering support.

I will update later.

Let me know if you have any questions.
